

MVH3 Hash Trash

If it ain't live hare, it ain't Mount Vernon

What's that you say?

What could explain such a large turnout? Was it the crisp, beautiful weather? Was it the hares' reputation for interesting trails and fabulous food? Or was it the convenient, inside-the-Beltway location? Oh don't be so naïve! These wrangling wankers were desperately trying to build up their run numbers so that they could steal others' presents at the long-anticipated MVH3 White Elephant holiday party on December 6! Ah yes, the White Elephant; that annual event around which the hashing year revolves!

The Trail

(ARLINGTON) In lieu of singing the Star Spangled Banner acapella, Cunning Runt opted to begin the morning's festivities by leading the Father Abraham warm-up. Thus invigorated and somewhat more awake, the pack of harriers shuffled away from the parking deck perched atop I-66 in slow pursuit of their quarry. Lest there be any confusion, that would be the beer at the end, rather than any hares on the "live" trail.

While running past Washington and Lee High School, The Pimp or Sarajevo reminisced, "A coach from my high school days had the opinion, based on runner behavior at the finish of races, that every mile of a race knocks 10 points off your IQ." And concerning the difference between hasher and the jackass, some observers hold that there isn't any. But this wrongs the jackass.

Approaching the Hilton, Two Hand Job was overheard to have an unusual complaint. Apparently her ass has been the subject of considerable biting. Speaking of Paris Hilton, was biting on the tape?

Following a trail of mysterious white powder (which was likely anthrax), the suspicious-looking pack fled through the streets of Ballston. After passing the IHOP and the fragrant, inviting aroma of Super Pollo, half-minds began to speculate what culinary feast the hares had in store for us.

By mid-run, the once united pack began to fragment into three distinct groups: the Olympic trial aspirants in front, the weekend warriors in the middle, and the beer athletes who would straggle in during the circle. This allowed each group to solve checks as if for the first time. When the weekend warriors lost flour by the [B]lubber Run Community Center, it was Put It Out who kept the pack together by calling On-On from the Michael Jackson Playground.

Emerging from the Lubber Creek trail, the weekend warriors found themselves leading the front runners, who were returning from a "backcheck 8" mark. "Now, here, you see, it takes all the running you can do, to keep in the same place," explained Crafty. "If you want to get somewhere else, you must run at least twice as fast as that!" Milk Money added.

Somewhere along the trail, Burning Bush complained to Burnt Sox that she was getting a bit warm. As you might expect from any male hasher, Burnt Sox encouraged her to take her top off. Burning Bush replied that she needed the support and didn't want to be jiggling around on trail. Burnt Sox replied, "Yes, you don't want to end up with two black eyes." A look of consternation crossed Burning Bush's face and a long pause ensued. Finally, she smiled and said, "I thought you said two black guys." Now she has begun to reconsider whether Jimi Hendrix really said, "Scuse me while I kiss this guy."

The On-In

At the On-In, the hares treated us to some delicious and filling stews (with a choice of chicken, beef, or vegan), along with cornbread and potato salad. Even with such a large crowd, these enterprising hares managed to provide plenty of food and beer for all – and still came in under budget! Congratulations and many thanks to Chapaquickdik, Fire and Ice, Mellow Foreskin Cheese, and Standard Deviant.
